Job Description

The IIHS is currently in the midst of a two year long curriculum development process, anchored by a network of renowned international and domestic partners from both the academy and practice worlds. This process is anchored by a core team within which members anchor particular theory-practice areas. We are looking for an economist to join our core curriculum development team, either full or part time.

Core team members are responsible for developing the curriculum framework through an open and international process involving multiple domestic and international partners. They act as internal anchors for IIHS in this process and ensure the constant evolution of the curriculum framework. They are thus heavily involved in course design and structure, curricular design, and research.

Requirements

The core team member must hold an advanced graduate degree in economics/public finance and/or public policy. However, we are looking first and foremost for interdisciplinary thinkers and therefore the successful candidate must exhibit a critical, grounded and expansive view of her own discipline and training. It is important that the candidate have a strong South-Asia centric education and/or practice base. Ideal candidates will have work/practice experience in one or more of a variety of settings, ranging from think tanks and research centres to consultancies and private firms. Successful candidates will possess both the desire and capacity to work in a team, and respond to continual deadlines in a challenging and stimulating work environment. Candidates with academic and/or work experience urban and settlement economics will be given some preference.

This is a paid position with a competitive salary, located in New Delhi. It can be full or part time. The search will remain open until the position is filled.

Diversity Policy

The IIHS is an equal opportunity employer that encourages women, people with disabilities and those from economically and socially excluded communities with the requisite skills and qualifications to apply for positions.
